

I don't want my home or office invaded again by telemarketers. These computer generated calls are an invasion of my time and the times they call are inconvenient. They tie up my office phone when patients need to get through. They call during meals or early in the morning. If I need a service I am intelligent enough to know where to look to find it. I automatically assume that any business that needs to sell their services using a telemarketer is not reliable or legitimate. Before the no-call list went into effect we were getting up to 20 calls a day. PLEASE do not relax the no-call list.

Barbara A. Hummel, MD